Reader's Newsletter

WELCOME READERS!

Welcome to the first edition of the Pen It! Publications Reader's Newsletter. This monthly newsletter will keep our readers informed of New Releases, Upcoming Events and Featured Authors.

About Pen It! Publications

Pen It! Publications is a traditional publisher. We have been in business since 2010. Owners Debi and Ray Stanton are both published authors who know how hard it can be for authors to get their work out there. That's why we offer a family-like atmosphere. We want our authors to feel at home.

Our reader base is growing daily and it is so important to us that we stay just as connected to our readers as we are to our authors. We welcome feedback and encourage you to leave reviews for Pen It! Books you have read.

We hope you enjoy this newsletter and continue to enjoy reading books published by Pen It! Authors. They so value your opinions and we hope that this newsletter will give you a little more insight into what we do.

God Bless

DON'T GIVE UP

By Tonya Andrews

Marketing Director

I cannot impart to you the absolute importance of continuing to move forward when all hope seems lost, or when it just does not seem worth it anymore. There are so many reasons to fight the good fight of faith, and move forward in God's plan for you.

In regard to being an author, or avid book reader, or one that has anything to do with a writing and/or publishing process, it can be a very challenging journey.

Writing is a very unique gift all on it's own. It takes imagination, creativity, expectation, hope and a lot of patience. Sometimes, the patience part is where it seems hope can be easily lost. Writing is something that takes a good amount of time. Novels, shorts stories, poems... they all have their proper place and time. They all also take their own amount of time to write. Debi Stanton has put out an amazing helpful workshop and workbook called Creative Writing. It gives very helpful details how to get thoughts in order when writing.

We have to unfortunately realize that just because we can see the story in our heads, that does not mean that all of the answers of life will come to us in an instant. We do not know what is heading our way for the most part, and if we did, we probably wouldn't be able to handle it.

Please consider that the more time we take in praying, studying, researching and contemplating, the more time we have to get every little detail that we are supposed to know. I have journal contemplations that I have from several years ago, that are not only being added to in these days, but also being used for my books and sermons.

"Wait on the Lord, be of good courage. And He shall strengthen your heart; wait I say, on the Lord!" Psalm 27:14

That scripture is very encouraging to me when I want to give up and toss in the towel. When the deceiver is at his seemingly best with fiery darts to discourage and distract me, I can find comfort and security in that Psalm scripture.

Please, do not give up. You are beautifully and wonderfully made in Him. Your life has purpose in the love of Christ.

FEATURED AUTHOR

Author Emmanuel Kulu Jr. is an African-American author/writer of Cameroonian descent. His father Emmanuel Kulu Sr. is a career engineer and his mother Betty Kulu is a career MD history educator. As a career Social worker, Kulu had a deep passion for history and creative arts. Kulu tapped into film writing and acting with films like "The Rize & Fall of Tephlon Ent.", "Bug Love", and "The First Purge".

In more recent years, Kulu turned his focus to embracing his African lineage. Upon deep study and research of great African kingdoms, he set his heart on Ancient Egypt as his first project as an author. Kulu questioned the validity of prior novel and film depictions of the imagery of the ancient Egyptians, who were in fact, African people. Based on his research Kulu created a mythological story based off true events, "I Black Pharaoh: Rise to Power".
